

REAL ESTATE

Owned or leased, real estate is generally a major categorical expense for health care providers, trailing only operations and employee overhead.

In-house real estate teams often struggle to find the time and capacity to properly evaluate important real estate decisions that can drive significant cost savings or value creation for the organization, including:

- Should we own or lease space?
- Should we hire a developer?
- Should we lease out space we own?
- Where should we build a new ambulatory care center?

Hall Render Advisory Services consultants serve as an extension of your in-house team — providing objective, independent and transparent guidance to help you navigate real estate challenges and harness opportunities. In short, we help you leverage real estate as a strategic asset for your organization.

Our team of consultants has earned the trust of health care systems nationwide by developing the best solutions to their real estate challenges. We help you manage complicated and time-consuming projects and processes that are part of any real estate endeavor. Our advisors serve to provide objective and conflict-free guidance to coach, advise and guide our clients through the myriad of real estate challenges that include but are not limited to the menu of services below.
